

Dr Emmanuel LETOUZE

Director and Co-Founder of Data-Pop Alliance, Visiting Scholar MIT Media Lab, USA

Emmanuel Letouzé, PhD, is the Director and co-Founder of Data-Pop Alliance, a coalition on Big Data, Artificial Intelligence, and development created in 2013 by the Media Lab, the Harvard Humanitarian Initiative, and the Overseas Development Institute, joined in 2016 by Flowminder. He is a Visiting Scholar at MIT Media Lab, has co-founded and serves as Program Director of the Open Algorithms (OPAL) project, and has served on the Program Committees of the 1st and 2nd UN World Data Forums. He wrote UN Global Pulse's White Paper "Big Data for Development" (2012) and has since then worked on the applications and implications of data and technology for development and democracy, especially related to official statistics, poverty, demography, crime, violence, privacy and ethics. Dr Letouzé worked as a Development Economist for UNDP in New York from 2006-09 on fiscal policy, post-conflict economic recovery and migration, and in 2000-04 as a technical assistant in public finance and official statistics for the French Ministry of Finance in Hanoi, Vietnam. He holds a BA in Political Science and an MA in Economic Demography from Sciences Po Paris, an MA in International Affairs specialized in Economic Development from Columbia University, where he was a Fulbright Fellow, and a PhD in Demography from UC Berkeley, where his dissertation focused on the use of cell-phone data for demo-economic research and development.